Thermore launches recycled stretch insulation

MILAN – Apparel insulation specialist Thermore has launched a new high-stretch fabric made with 50% post-consumer recycled polyester.

Branded as Freedom, Thermore says the new insulation comes in four levels of warmth, ranging from 60-150 grams per square metre, whilst stringent dynamometer testing demonstrates high levels of elasticity. It also recovers to 100% of its pre-stretch size.

With the ability to offer high levels of warmth, Freedom has applications in alpine sports, running, golf, commuter, fishing and hunting, cycling and a host of other active pursuits.

“The ability to provide warmth while also allowing for a dynamic range of motion is what impels performance brands to utilise Thermore in their product lines,” the company said in statement, adding that the new Freedom insulation adds a higher level of comfort and functionality than was previously attainable in the stretch category.

The Freedom insulation is also GRS certified, is machine washable and can be dry cleaned.

Thermore was founded in 1972 in Milan and is a major global player in the research, production and marketing of thermal insulation for apparel with operations in Europe, USA and Asia including production facilities in Thailand and offices in Hong Kong.
